President's Message

Bob Taylor-Vaisey

Both the Society and Hutchison House Museum have a successful and enviable track record, and our reputation is pretty solid - these will provide us with a solid foundation on which to build for the future. The secret to continued success is the expansion of what we do to a wider community which is increasingly diverse in its interests and sense of history.

And we need to explore opportunities to continue our success with a new focus that builds on the past and builds for the future. We cannot wait for opportunities to come to us - we must do the work now and have people in place so that we are positioned to search out and take advantage of new opportunities.

Things are pretty tight, both financially and with our ability to resource all we do now, not to mention future initiatives.

At the September meeting of the Board, several key initiatives were launched and we will keep you apprised each month of our progress. If you would like to be involved in these discussions more directly, please email me at bob.taylorvaisey@gmail.com.

Here are the key initiatives:

- 1. A Task Force, headed by Dale Standen, to review exhibits and program requirements for the Society and Hutchison House Museum in light of evolving community interests and museum approaches
- 2. Increased effort to develop a comprehensive business plan to attract partners, sponsors and investors in support of our programs
- 3. Reconstitution of a Membership Committee focusing on recruitment of a broader spectrum of members
- 4. The establishment of a Marketing and Communications Committee

I am also pleased to announce the appointment of Ian Ellis, a graduate student in Canadian Studies at Trent University, as Editor of the Bulletin, and at the same time thank Jodi Aoki for her outstanding work both as Editor, and as Recording Secretary for the Society.

PHS Previous Month's Meeting "The Evolution of the Garage: The Effects of Technology on the Built Landscape"

Jennifer Guerin, City of Peterborough Heritage Programs Coordinator, gave a fascinating illustrated talk on the evolution of the garage (derived from the French word garer to shelter) and its impact on domestic architecture and the urban landscape. Automobiles were rare in the early years of the 20th century as most people walked or used horse and buggy. Carriage sheds were usually located to the rear of the property which is where the first garages were built. Garage doors could only swing open, which was a challenge in winter with snow accumulation. The electric door opener was invented in 1921 which evolved into the convenient opener we rely on today. The transformation of the garage from a stand-alone structure to an integral part of the house emerged in the 1930s but became common in the post war expansion of the residential suburbs. The car was no longer a status symbol but a practical and affordable means of transportation and the garage became an integral part of the house. Indeed, the use of materials, design and siting all blended together to make the garage a seamless and unobtrusive element of vernacular as well as stylistic domestic architecture. Questions from the audience speculated in the future of the garage as urban intensification, environmental awareness and expansion of public transportation put less emphasis on the automobile. Perhaps the garage will come full circle and be relegated to the rear or even off site from the living quarters. Those surviving early examples of garage design and location are worthy candidates for heritage recognition.

I enjoyed a lengthy conversation with M. Lajoie about the wider context of Francophone migration from Quebec in the 19th century and put him in touch with our longstanding member and historian, Elwood Jones, who has published articles on Montreal House and the French in Peterborough. I also advised him of the research work of Peter McConkey on Francophones in Peterborough between the 1860s and 1880s. Peter McConkey is the co-recipient of the PHS's F. H. Dobbin Award of 2020-21 for his many genealogical studies on migrants to Peterborough.

M. Lajoie researched the subject further with the City's Heritage department and in other historical records. His article in Le Devoir spread Peterborough's Francophone history to a much larger Francophone audience. His article may be found online:
